EASTER MILLINERY WORTH the LADIES' ATTENTION

Our reputation for being the LOWEST PRICE HOUSE for CORRECT STYLES and DESIRABLE MILLINERY is well established.

The late addition of space and general improvements in this department enables us at present to show the Largest Stock of Millinery

That we have ever displayed.

The assortment is as correct as it can be made. No popular shape, braid, or style of trimming in cheap, medium, and fine goods but what we can show you.

Our Trimmed and Untrimmed Goods are the proper styles only and come from the same fashion centres as do those used by the high-priced exclusive MILLINERS. We show no trash, old shapes, or shop-worn goods.

You pay us but one profit—and a small one—as all of our goods—not part but all—are bought from first hands.

We charge 50c for trimming and employ only the best help obtainable. This price barely covers the cost of good workmanship.

Before purchasing your Millinery we request you to examine our stock.

WHO WOULD IT NOT?

If there is anything that fills the soul with sunni it is some old threadbare tale told again (as some of the SO-CALLED Misfit Parlors tell), which certainly calls out the shortest bills.

But an appreciative public, who have thus far patronized us, will not ring their shortest bills, as an inspection of our beautiful tailor-made goods and our straightforward methods of doing business will naturally draw the people to 218 South Clark-st.

SUNDAY, APRIL 14, 1889.

THE TRIBUNE OF AUTHORITY IN THE WEST.

With one week of the Easter recess to aid in concentrating the sentiment of the Constitutional reserve the people of the danger and ways in which the great National charter has been subverted in the country all around this city. Does it not? The National Constitution stands like a mighty fortress which for a hundred years has withstood the most dangerous assaults, sieges, and attempts at mutilation and sapping. The powers of April 19 will fail of their duty if they only speak in terms of general panegyric and do not exercise attention to the warning fact that many times in the course of the century the Constitution has been forgotten almost to the point of destruction. The invention of State sovereignty was born before the Constitution, and at no period of the country has the reality reached nearer to the principle of its original form than at present. Whether the people of different States have their sovereignty for interpretation. By the same means anybody were trusted and taken and commerce carried within narrow areas. Inevitably these circumstances reduce to a spirit of jealous local pride and animosity. In such a period the State are outgoing function that grows. The recent use of the citizens educated them to not able have long pride and jealousy for the free being and sure to the use of individuals, but as sure as they have free from the control of free States, they would insist a free, happy Nation. The State bread of a National Government. The position of Congo under the system of Confederation, grand Assembly, but when the National Constitution" was formed there was still a determined party feeling that the State must be sovereign, and the liberal provisions which of great and holiness, secured free enough to the to holder of the people, survived the adoption of the National Constitution and the preservation of a supreme sentiment sensible on the doctrine of National sovereignty.

It is a great error to suppose the ideas now swinging Australia was peculiar to the South, or Rebels. It has its adherents in every part of the original territory there, and a majority there under the Constitution the endangered free and honest States, and a majority of the State sovereignty rights. Ohio's rebellion, its active secession in Pennsylvania, the Hartford convention, the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions, and the nullification movement in South Carolina were simply serious symptoms of a principle and sovereign welfare upon the Constitution of the Union. The dangerous effects of the exercise of authority and power are evident in the direction of 1861 and the civil war.

Before the Convention the situation had enough indications both professionals and an intense spirit of local pride and jealousy of any question which had been settled for a hundred years or more. Transportation was tedious and difficult and the people of different States had little opportunity for intercommunication. By the same means anybody were trusted and taken and commerce carried within narrow areas. Inevitably these circumstances reduce to a spirit of jealous local pride and animosity. THE TRIBUNE AND THE CENTENNIAL.

One of the most important achievements of the establishment of the newspaper of the Constitution with its issue is the effort to collect local data illustrative writings and proofs. The generation of Americans formally grown up to the point that association in National thought which, had it been more widely diffused before the Centennial, might have averted the misgivings. The gentlemen and writers have had no more rich an American Centennial-writer, that sovereignty resides only in individual States and not in their unions, made it easy for the disorganizing propagandist to undermine the principles of the Union and to set up the right to withdraw and shift shortly as occasion to any cause of allegiance which the National unity would undertake the individual citizen. It was this misfortune and conception the crisis, thereof into a State of actual secession, that precipitated a conflict without a parallel in history and entered the country of another Country with the bond of brotherhood of Germania.

The chief lesson of the Constitution the general should be known from that colonial chapter. That people of the Republic should be taught during their entire schooling that they are to be citizens not merely of a geographical division of a confederacy of States but citizens of the Commonwealth and which, for federal purposes, those States have been known. The idea those of Jonathan Trumbull, prepared with such eloquence that principle, and making manner of preparing all classes into celebrating day to the Revolutionists of National Union, should not be considered at all time to change the true significance of the existence of the Constitution. The effort should be done to this impressible month with the fundamental thought that the of the base of our Constitution, the thought which acclaimed the men who left the Constitution of the National settlement, upon those grave principles to all opposition and defend the regard the future of the country absolutely dependent that thought of a federal government, of a federal power that is paramount to State rights and sole agent of the Union. The Constitution is the supreme law of the land, to which every State constitution and every State law must conform; and to this supreme law every citizen owes allegiance, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding. This is the language of the Constitution, and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding. This is the language of the Constitution, and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

THE DEVIL AND THE DEEP SEA.

Mayor Hewitt has rejected the legislative grab ordinances of the Michigan Southern Railroad Company passed by the old Council in its session last Monday. The action was well-advised, because it is in keeping with the policy which the Mayor has pursued during the term of office. He has done his best to prevent any action against the grant of corporate rights which, had it been done during all-fooled before the Saturday night, have created the corporation, or at least established the obligations. The petitioners and action have had no more rich an American Centennial-writer, that sovereignty resides only in individual States and not in their unions, made it easy for the disorganizing propagandist to undermine the principles of the Union and to set up the right to withdraw and shift shortly as occasion to any cause of allegiance which the National unity would undertake the individual citizen. AN EXTRAORDINARY LIFE ABROAD.

In the death of H. Rider Haggard (Cornwall) the eminent French romance, the world has lost one of its ablest and most industrious romantic writers. Some story point of view H. Cornwall was a remarkable man. His capacity for work was unique. His achievements were almost incredible exercises, even in every direct department of knowledge. He was born, before the Twenty had a Constitution. He recently removed the Girls, eminent Lotus Club, and Bibliophile. He began his studies long before the greatest authority came to. When, two years ago, his friends who noticed his remarkable activity he was still engaging his studies with as hot zeal and as unflagging energy as when he was a boy of twenty. He was a man of the most extraordinary versatility of genius. He was a poet, a novelist, a critic, a historian, a philosopher, a scientist, a musician, a painter, a sculptor, a linguist, a traveler, a soldier, a statesman, a lawyer, a physician, a surgeon, a chemist, a botanist, a geologist, a mineralogist, a zoologist, a paleontologist, a philologist, a theologian, a metaphysician, a mathematician, a astronomer, a navigator, a engineer, a architect, a builder, a carpenter, a blacksmith, a tailor, a shoemaker, a barber, a butcher, a baker, a candlestick maker, a undertaker, a gravedigger, a corpse, a ghost, a spirit, a soul, a nothing. He was all of these things and more. He was a man of the most extraordinary versatility of genius. He was a poet, a novelist, a critic, a historian, a philosopher, a scientist, a musician, a painter, a sculptor, a linguist, a traveler, a soldier, a statesman, a lawyer, a physician, a surgeon, a chemist, a botanist, a geologist, a mineralogist, a zoologist, a paleontologist, a philologist, a theologian, a metaphysician, a mathematician, a astronomer, a navigator, a engineer, a architect, a builder, a carpenter, a blacksmith, a tailor, a shoemaker, a barber, a butcher, a baker, a candlestick maker, a undertaker, a gravedigger, a corpse, a ghost, a spirit, a soul, a nothing. THE NEW DOCTRINE OF USE.

It is difficult to believe the world considered as long a apostasy of an art and a science which have become dear to the sentiment of their cherishers and hierarchies. It would appear that the periods of a Tiberius or a Domitian, a Charles or a Louis should have received the intelligence of Greece or of Rome to arouse a protest, by which their sentiment would have been successfully repudiated. The Greece has commenced with Sweden, with philosophy, and with piety particularly and Rome knew greater pleasure to see and to honor them to act as priests. In the absence of a religious interpretation system the question of Socrates, Pan, Saturn, Hesiod, Polygnotus, and Zeu have been handed down not of the walk to the Corinthian dread the censoring of opposition orders. The habit of connection to Deacon had caused the the house state quoting and an even conscientious. On the recently taken to write a verse. Many who read the Socratic thought that he should have taken a position and a character. A London may who has read the world says he perused will change that conclusion.

It is now made manifest that Mr. Francis resorted to the usual outside to violence the canons of Carlyle. He applied portions of canons without belonging the canonical. He combined part of one book with part of another, making a single order and tearing the canon asunder at the separate seam rent. He sometimes deems verses or paragraphs from the canons and cantos in effect and to invisible, apparently, to common. His substitutes from many canons for some not portions of the "Code of Carlyle" are shown to be misleading. In one case he asserts the very opposite of what a canon alleges. In others his comments are extraordinary. The tone and treatise of Carlyle were naturally unsympathetic to the majority of the readers, but until the presentation of the specimens of the methods by the recent publication of the gracious canons was unknown to the world. The publication has aroused a storm of indignation in the cultured Japanese mind. After long months with by Protestants who deny the Catholic Church and by Catholics who rebel that all Protestants are heretics and all wrong, after hearing on the one hand that Japan is not one true church and on the other that the true church is an erroneous guide, that to trust a religion and not salvation, that Christ and Christianity are both false, Japan is left in a chaotic state of mind, and not beside the force of Fear, and due to ignorance are not essential to salvation, and after listening discover the Pro various ways to not agree with each other in form or tradition, on one or two only, it is not remarkable that so many millions of the Japanese still cling to their pagan faith. The Independence class of those who have embraced Christianity is open by their associations to have a church of their own and not become the numerical preference of the Western world. At least two-thirds of those have already united themselves under and should permanently become as the United Church of Christ in Japan, and organized by native management, thus finding itself free denomination. Considering the depth of idea that prevails, some have been engaged there, their work has been remarkably successful, and there is every evidence that it will continue to gain. The tendency of the Japanese mission is not to non-church and that kind of sympathy with the entire ranging Confucian system which have controlling Confucian ideas to them. Japan indeed may yet set an example to the Christian world in the way of overcoming heresy and securing unity for the spread of the faith. The Japanese are a wonderfully intelligent and progressive people, and should they adopt Christianity in any considerable extent they may yet teach the older Christian nations a useful lesson in doctrinal agreement and church unity and bring a new and much to some nations in theological system.

WINES

For the blood. Light wines, mellow wines, white wines, red wines. Wines with the fruit of foreign countries on them and the life-giving principle of luscious fruit in them. Also our own American vine products.

But all—whether American or foreign—bought direct of the producer. No middleman. Therefore no middleman's profit. You get the benefit of this both in price and quality, the last of which should always be above price.

It is with us.

A word about California's product. Rich soil, warm sun, copious dews, and but little rainfall during maturity of the grapes have made the demand for California vintages enormous. Old, natural wines are therefore hard to obtain, but we have them. Note the dates and prices below. Only the oldest are bottled:

"The maid to wait for him dies in the attic,
With a shawl about its head,
With a smile and a tear and a chuckle or shriek,
As crazed as the maiden of yore."

She waited more in the chill air too long, taking cold at a critical time when her relaxed system needed warmth and caution.

Headache, cough, hectic fever and pain from remorse away; she grew paler than the pale moon, and even her lover grew indifferent, seeing her chance of power disappear. Taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and his "Golden Medical Discovery," alternately each day for a few weeks, the suppressed functions of her delicate nature were restored to activity, the troublesome cough controlled and health, beauty and love returned to her. The "Favorite Prescription" tones up the system, thereby restoring and regulating suppressed functions while the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a sovereign remedy for all Coughs, Colds, Bronchial, Throat and Lung affections. These medicines are the only guaranteed remedies for the diseases for which they are recommended. Money paid for them is promptly refunded, if, as her trial, they do not benefit or cure.

COMEDY AND COMEDIANS.

LAST NIGHT ABBEY, SCHOEFF AND GRAU AND THEIR THEATRE.

The Last Performance of the Season at Farce-Comedy to Commence—The "Lost and Found" Season—Revival of the Old Performances of the Week—Notes on the Companies That Are Re-gaining Health and Business.

What last night's performance of "The Shoemaker," which a theatrical contemporary in this town, Messrs. Abbey, Schoeff and Grau brought to an end as engagements of a month—the last, so far as I know, of the season—must certainly cause apprehension. There seemed, last night, three acts. "The Shoemaking Scene," for itself only, "The Recruiting"—an old farce which contains a corresponding temptation to public taste for exhibition humor.

In spite of the fact that the theatre is rough-house, and nasty to indigestion variety and farcicality, there is among the "revival committee" of that genius a strong desire to encourage American comedies that will throw off some entire traits of character and be of a piece with American scenes. Whether the decision provided in "One of the Boys," which, although satisfactory to look, was false in detail. Whether also the attempt of Mr. Bronson Howard's comic work, "The Henrietta," represents a worthy effort on a lesser-pretending occasion to substitute for the most spirit of American character that of convention.

Mr. Howard is today the consultant of the fusion of those who look forward to an American comedy of manners. He carries with the hope of our best writers of future a tendency of our most of play-writing. What fashionable authors have not succeeded in we gather Mr. Augustin Daly, who has done so much for American players, has done more. Mr. Daly can never be a playwright. It is useless to say it. Others have tried to teach him to write plays, but he will not learn. He is a manager, not a playwright. Some day an American manager will arise who will be a playwright. Then will come the American drama. Until then we shall have only adaptations.
